European Union

The European Commission has published its Employment and Social Developments in Europe (ESDE) report 2023. Despite a high employment rate across the EU (74.6 percent in 2022) and with an unemployment rate of 6.2 percent on a historic low the Commission report finds labour and skills shortages persist and looks at possible ways to tackle them.

The EU's transition to sustainability. EU Commission presents ten fields of action. Vocational education and training, up- and reskilling as well as lifelong learning fall thematically under the eighth point, which is to increase labour market participation among all segments of the population.

Eurochambres

Learning mobility as a lever for skills development. In the position on Learning Mobility, Eurochambres welcomes the current revision of the European mobility framework and the ambition to tackle existing obstacles to learning mobility. The emphasis on the mobility of apprentices and recognition of mobility periods are also positive signs. Eurochambres underlines the need to support the mobility of adult learners, as part of a comprehensive vocational education and training (VET) development policy. Strengthening the use of a work-based approach to education and training can also be a powerful tool, in view to upskilling and reskilling the European workforce and establishing a lifelong learning culture.

Two years after its implementation, the Recovery and Resilience Facility instrument has not yet provided the financial relief that the European economy needed following the pandemic. In a recently published position, Eurochambres observed deficiencies in the disbursement and absorption of funding at regional and local level.

Students in the four upper secondary education programmes have very different social and academic backgrounds, and their choice of upper secondary education is an identity choice among young people. This is central knowledge seen in continuation of the Reform Commission's report on a different youth education system.

The plural worlds of jobseeker training: Since the 2000s, the training landscape for jobseekers has undergone a series of reforms, the most emblematic in 2018 of which concerns the overhaul of the personal training account (CPF). How have these developments affected training providers and their offerings? Research conducted by Céreq shows that this landscape, previously described as rather homogeneous, is in fact plural and crossed by very different conceptions of formation. These constitute "worlds" with heterogeneous logics. However, two of these "worlds" stand out in this landscape: that of "agile" training and that of "market" training.
